

In the Olympics, are Women improving faster than Men?

One of the features of Olympic Games history is that women have had to win a series of battles to be able to compete. However while the performances (winning times and distances) of men in Olympic Games events are generally superior to those of women, women's performances often appear to be improving faster than men's.

Surely this means that in the near future women will overtake men – or does it?